

UnitedHealth Group Inc.

Board Opposes Letting Shareholders Vote on Pay

Several institutional investors want UnitedHealth Group Inc. to give shareholders a nonbinding say on executive compensation, a proposal that doesn't sit well with the company's board. Walden Asset Management, a division of Boston Trust & Investment Management Co., a UnitedHealth shareholder, plans to introduce a proposal at the annual meeting in June that the board allow investors to vote on an advisory resolution to ratify the compensation of top executive officers. UnitedHealth's board recommends that shareholders oppose the proposal.